The Definite Article and the Interrogative heh: Exercise, Key to Answers

[Instructions: In the following passage, an excerpt from the first chapter of Job, identify the definite article and the interrogative heh, marking them in different colors. Ignore articles combined with prepositions. You should find two instances of the interrogative heh, twenty instances of the article, and one instance of an interrogative heh which, with the knowledge that you have at this point, you cannot distinguish from the article.]

The definite article is highlighted in green, the interrogative heh in yellow, and the unknown heh in purple.
Note: הַחִמָם, for naught is an adverb, and the definite article would not be prefixed to an adverb.
